#048:Nico Parlevliet: Adoration of the Northern Lights (2016)

With a beach towel rolled under your arm you walk through the city.

After a while you stop and determine the North [by means of the sun or by means of an app on your smartphone].

When done you unroll your towel and spread it on the floor (grass/tiles/asphalt) in Northern direction.

You will greet the light in a ritual way by kneeling down on the towel and bending down your head towards the north.

After that, depending on weather conditions, you can then lay down, in comfortable adoration of the light, or you can again roll up the towel and continue your walk.

All this is meant to emphasise the importance of the northern light to the artist.

NB: Please note this will only work in the Northern hemisphere.

If your performance takes place south of the equator you will have to replace the word 'North' by the word 'South'.
