#074:Paul Money: Transmissions (2016)

Oral Transmission:

Overhear a stranger saying something. Remember it or write it down. Later, say the same thing in a conversation without letting the person know.

Object Transmission:

You must pick a material from the ground e.g. a leaf, some gravel, some soil, that will not be missed and keep it with you secretly for half the day. For example if you pick it in the morning you must keep it until the afternoon. You must then put the material back in an appropriate new place: underneath a different tree, on the road, in a garden.

Movement Transmission:

Look for the movement of a stranger that you can isolate and imitate. For example scratching their nose, turning as they walk, putting down a bag to rest. Go to another part of the city and perform the same action as them.
