#106: Denis Rioux: First, I do not photograph (2016)

-Every day you look through your camera viewfinder oriented to the north.

-You frame what is in front of you, you make the focus and you adjust the aperture and the speed according to the meter.

-Then... you don't take the picture.

-You take notes of the technical information in a small handbook:

date, speed (S),
aperture (A)
and distance (F)
for each day.

One 'picture' a day for each page of the book until it's full.
